TO BRING NEGRO EXCURSIONS HERE

Western Maryland will again Use Gettysburg as Dumping Ground for Baltimore's Colored People.
Disgraceful Scenes Last Year.

Promising to restrict the number to 2500, the Western Maryland Railway announces that it will run an excursion of colored people from Baltimore to Gettysburg on Monday, July 20. On Monday of next week a similar excursion, though not so large, will be run
to this place from Hagerstown.

The disgraceful condition which prevailed here on September 8 last, is still fresh in the minds of Gettysburg people. On that day the Western Maryland flooded the town with 7240 colored people, the last train arriving here at 3 p. m. and hundreds of the excursionists not being able to get away until the following morning
after a night spent along the tracks at the local station. The day following the excursion the following appeared in The Times:

"One woman shot as the result of a drunken brawl, three persons injured in a trolley accident caused by an intoxicated passenger, an officer assaulted by a mob of fifty negroes, a citizen robbed of $35, numerous fights and a scene of general debauch ended at half past five this morning when the Western Maryland started on their homeward way the last of the 7240 colored excursionists which the road dumped into Gettysburg on Monday.

"It is doubtful if any excursion ever run to the town has brought forth the wide-spread and openly expressed indignation which was aroused in Gettysburg Monday evening when the throng of negroes, hundreds of them partially or entirely under the influence of liquor, thronged the town and created a condition which disgraced every citizen who was unfortunate enough to see it."

Whether or not Gettysburg is to be subjected to a repetition of this same outrage again this year remains to be seen. In the minds of most people, restricting the number to 2500 is but a small remedy for the offense which the Western Maryland renders the town every time it picks Gettysburg as its dumping ground. The negroes which they bring from Baltimore are usually the off-scouring of the city,
the better class of colored folk refusing to patronize the excursions. Gettysburg is the only resort which will accept them and here is where they are brought.

In response to a vigorous protest
several years ago, the Western Maryland discontinued these excursions.
Then came an appeal for a little concession, on the argument that the road was in financial difficulties and needed the revenue. Business men of town acceded to the request and offered no objection in case a smaller excursion were run. The road has taken advantage of this favor in the past and it is but reasonable to suppose that the town may expect at least some trouble from the excusions which it is now proposed to run here this month.

HOUSE DESTROYED

He Picks Berries.

The picking of berries, it is reported, cost William Deitz, of Brush-town, near Hagerstown, his home and its furnishings. Deitz went berry picking and forgot to close the drafts on the stove, which became red hot and set fire to the house. It was burned to the ground with all of its contents. It was a frame structure a story and a half high. A house nearby was saved. It is estimated that Deitz's loss will be about $200.

FORM UNIQUE ORGANIZATION

Young Boys who Helped Veterans
here Last July to Form Organization. Scouts Back of Movement to Start Society.

The memory of the great battle anniversary at Gettysburg last July is to be perpetuated by a new and unique organization which has had its inception at Frederick. It is to be known as the "Boy Scouts Gettysburg Service Corps" and is to include chapters at Washington, Philadelphia, Frederick, Hagerstown and Burlington, New Jersey.

The service rendered by the Boy Scouts from these cities last July was one of the matters of great satisfaction to those who had the big camp in charge. The skill with which the well drilled youngsters in khaki cared for the veterans when they arrived here, and during their stay in camp, was responsibly largely for the comfort of the old soldiers and the fact that there were so few accidents on the field.

Scattered through the various streets were these boys, always ready and anxious to perform some little service, and they were constantly on duty both day and night. About five hundred of them were in the big camp
and, of that number, almost one hundred were Red Cross Scouts, aiding greatly in the care of many minor cases of heat prostration.

The greatest praise was accorded the youngsters for their work here and the formation of the first chapter in Frederick is expected to be followed by similar action in the other cities, leading to an organization which in after years may look back upon July 1913 as one of the greatest epochs in the lives of its members.

TELL OF DEFEAT

Hanover Papers Show Good Spirit
over Tuesday's Game.

The Hanover papers took the defeat of their team at Gettysburg in sportsmanlike fashion, making no excuse and giving Rohrbach due credit for his pitching. The Independent says:

The Champs (?) journeyed to Gettysburg and after learning all about the great battle, the number killed and wounded on each side, also learned how base ball should be played.
We understand that at Gettysburg a man is employed, as coach, to teach the boys the fine art of "hitting them out" and "use your noodle", when occasion arises. The boys from Adams county certainly showed aptitude yesterday and at the same time "showed us up", getting our number by a 1 to 0 score.

The Independent then devotes much space to a demand for regular practice, something which is largely responsible for Gettysburg's success.
The Record Herald among its "Pickups" says:

"Ira Plank has developed some team for Gettysburg."

"The umpire after the game went to Hotel Gettysburg and apologized to Manager Chenoweth for calling Scherdel out in the ninth—it being a foul strike."

$3.09. This evening's game is between

PREPARE FOR SUMMER CAMPS

Gettysburg's Camping Clubs to Spend a Week or Ten Days Each along the Creeks of the County. Some Announce Dates.

Moonlight nights and warm summer winds have caused Gettysburg's nature lovers to turn their thoughts toward the many pretty resorts of the county, and camping trips galore are now in process of arrangement. Individual family camps by the dozen will dot nearby streams during July and August while the organized camping clubs will take their usual outings.

One of the first to go out will be Kamp Kill Kare which plans to take out canvas for a two weeks' outing either next Monday or Tuesday. For several years this club has been camping at Table Rock but will make a change this summer, going either to the John R. Kuhn woods, near East Berlin, or to Knoxlyn. The place has not yet been determined.

The annual camp of the Masonic Club will open this year on August 6.
They will spend their outing at their house near the junction of Rock and Marsh creeks which form the Monocacy. This week the club organized for the year by electing these officers, president, J. Harry Holtzworth; vice president, S. S. Neely Esq.; secretary,
D. A. Skelly; treasurer, J. Allen
Holtzworth.

Camp Welcome, one of the oldest camps in the county, will open their annual outing at Knoxlyn on August 12. The membership of this camp dates back for many years and several generations now lay claim to having been at one time or another active participants in the outing at the Highland township resort.

The local people who for several years have been taking houseboat trips on the Chesapeake and Ohio canal will go out for another week's enjoyment this year. Whether or not the houseboat is again to be used has not been decided but, if it is, the route will likely be from Williamsport to Cumberland.

Natural Dam will be the site for the annual camp of the Presbyterian Boys' Club. This club has held several meetings recently to make preparations for their camp and will decide definitely on the date at another session which is called for Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. C. B. Stouffer is assisting the boys in their preparations.

Camp Sing Sing, established last year, will again report for a two weeks' tour of duty at Dicks' Dam on August 7. The club gets its name from the vocal aspirations of its membership which includes Maurice B. Bender, John Sachs, G. Edgar Miller, Durbin Ott, John Blocher, Curtis Sheads, Rogers Musselman, and Amos Musselman.

MANY MISHAPS IN TOWN AND COUNTY

Little Daughter of Mr. and Mrs.
Stauffer Sustains Broken Arm.
Automobile Runs into Large Rock.
County People Hurt.

The three children of Mr. and Mrs.
H. T. Stauffer, of Water street, were all hurt Wednesday afternoon when they fell from a horse which they were riding near their home. Mary, one of the twin daughters, sustained a slight fracture of the arm near the wrist. The other twin and the little boy received only bruises.

While on a return trip home from Hanover on Tuesday evening, Arthur Taughinbaugh, of York street, accompanied by three companions, drove into a large rock which some unknown person had rolled onto the public road about midway between New Oxford and Hanover. The Taughinbaugh automobile was so badly damaged that it was unable to proceed farther. The machine was left on the road until morning when necessary repairs were made. Mr. Taughinbaugh spent the night in New Oxford,
and the others returned to Hanover.

An automobile party of seven Littlestown people had a narrow escape from serious injury Wednesday evening at the big hill at the Shriver farm, near Union Mills. A broken spindle caused one of the wheels to leave the machine, a seven passenger Kline Kar, belonging to Maurice Wehler and other damage was done to the automobile before it was stopped. Fortunately the car did not overturn and the occupants, who included
Mr. Wehler's family and Mr. and Mrs.
Moudy, were unhurt.

William D. Gilbert, of Gettysburg, had the index finger of his right hand painfully hurt on Wednesday when it caught in the machinery at the local foundry.

Spangler Hetrick, residing on a small farm near New Oxford, met with an accident this week that has caused him much pain. He was unloading hay at his barn and, stopping to rest a few minutes, was leaning against the rear ladder of the hay carriage, when his weight caused the ladder to give way, and he fell head-foremost to the floor, striking the plank. He sustained a severe cut and bruises to his nose and other parts of the face, and a slight wound on the forehead. A local physician gave the necessary attention.

Mrs. Bower, wife of L. J. Bower, residing near New Chester, met with a serious accident on Saturday evening. Mrs. Bower, who is well advanced in years, was engaged at gathering raspberries near her home, when she tripped and fell over a large stone, breaking both bones of her left leg near the ankle.

DANCE ARGUMENT

Owners of Parks Must Choose Between Dancers and Church Picnics.

Owners of Boiling Springs, Mount Holly, Bellaire and other parks in the vicinity of Carlisle face a peculiar situation as the result of the "tango war" now on there. They are compelled to choose, as the result of action by the councils of the various churches, between having their respective taboos as places for Sunday school picnics or to lose the patronage of the scores of tango loving Carlisleers who throng the various floors on the days of the picnics.

The movement against dancing was begun by the St. Paul's Lutheran congregation, who at their picnic held some weeks ago refused to take the park if dancing was allowed. The same stand is taken by the Methodists, who picnic on Saturday.

POLICE NEWS

Local Officers Make Several Arrests.
One for Reckless Driving.

Western Maryland Officer Charles H. Wilson caught another train rider here Wednesday night when a man giving his name as Connolly was about to get on the Western Express which seems to be a favorite train for the knights of the road desiring a quick journey to Pittsburgh. He was placed in jail to await a hearing.

George Ciancello, of Waterbury,
Connecticut, was taken before Squire Harnish by Chief Emmons Wednesday night on a charge of speeding in the Square. It cost the visitor $14.75.

BALK AT PLAN FOR MEDIATION

Rebels Oppose Proposal to Halt Mexico City's Capture.

WOULD MEAN OTHER WARS

Constitutionalists Assert Government by Military Rule Is Solution of Problem.

Laredo, Tex., July 9.—The Constitutionalists are unlikely to accept the offer of the Niagara Falls mediators for a conference with representatives of Huerta to arrange a provisional government in Mexico. This announcement, coming from an unquestioned source, reached the border here.

It was declared that the generals of the Constitutional army to whom the question was submitted for advice by General Carranza had, with the exception of the generals of Obregon's division, who have not yet had time to report, strongly oppose any such conference.

The Constitutional position, it was said, is that an agreement to accept a provisional government must cause the outbreak of other revolutionary movements.

General Carranza, it is said, has given assurances that if the Tampico gateway is opened and he can obtain through that port arms and ammunition and supplies, he will take Mexico City within a very short time, establishing peace on a firm basis under military rule until it is possible to hold a fair election.

Villa and Carranza Reach Agreement.

El Paso, Tex., July 9.—Reconstruction of the Constitutional government machinery in the state of Chihuahua will begin immediately as a result of a peace agreement reached between the Villa and Carranza factions in the conciliation conference at Torreon.

Carranza officials, ousted from office in Juarez and other Chihuahua cities by the Villa faction, will be reinstated. Such action means the restoring of telegraph and railroad lines to the control of the Carranza appointees.

These men are among the twenty-four Carranza officials held as virtual prisoners in Chihuahua City by Villa.

In return for these concessions, Villa has acknowledged absolute subordination to Carranza as "first chief." Whether General Felipe Angeles, chief of artillery under Villa, will be expelled from the Constitutional ranks by Carranza's orders, still is a matter of conjecture.

Carranza is not to interfere with concessions granted by Villa, who will continue to name his own civil officials in the territory which he conquers or already holds.

When Mexico City has been taken, the chiefs of the forces in the field will select a man for provisional president who will then attempt to pacify the country and hold constitutional elections.

This last caluse is taken by many to mean that Angeles will be the provisional president when the final victory over Huerta is won. He has been the favorite of Villa, and Villa is expected to dominate or try to dominate the situation if the Mexican capital is ever taken.

Many of Carranza's generals, however, will remain loyal to him and a new revolution is expected to spring up immediately—Villa against Carranza, if Carranza wins, and Carranza against Villa if Villa should succeed in forcing Angeles into the provisional presidency.

Mexican Mutiny Worries Washington.

Washington, July 9.—Official advice received at the war department from General Funston show that the mutiny among the Mexican Federal troops near Vera Cruz is more serious than appears from the press dispatches from that place.

General Funston's last message on the subject said that fighting was in progress between loyal troops and the mutineers.

General Funston made preparations for meeting any attack, but instructed the outpost commanders that inasmuch as General Pena had disclaimed any hostile intent upon the part of the forces under his command they would fire only in self-defense. No attack developed.

The administration has received information that members of General Huerta's family had arrived at Vera Cruz. Well informed officials of the government regard this as merely a preliminary to the flight of Huerta.

The advices received were coupled with the information that the wife of Senor Mohna, former minister of commerce in the Huerta cabinet, was with the Huerta party and would wait at Vera Cruz for the arrival of her husband before sailing away from Mexico. From this it is inferred that Huerta and Mohna will leave Mexico City together and join their families at Vera Cruz.

BIG CORN YIELD IS CROP SHOWING

930,000,000 Bushels of Wheat is Forecast.

Washington, July 9.—Thirty million bushels of wheat were added to the prospects of the crop during June by the excellent weather conditions, making the forecast of the crop, as announced by the department of agriculture, 930,000,000 bushels, a new record.

The acreage planted to corn this year was only slightly less than that of last year, while the condition of that crop was one per cent better than the ten-year July 1 average condition, making the prospects good for a crop estimated at 2,868,000,000 bushels. That would be better than the average for five years.

A 200,000,000 pound decrease in the tobacco crop is indicated, a total crop of 733,000,000 pounds being estimated.

MRS. CARMAN HELD FOR MURDER

Wife of Doctor is Charged With Crime.

NEW WITNESS IS FOUND

Man Says He Saw Woman at Window Through Which Fatal Shot Was Fired on Night of Tragedy.

Freeport, L. I., July 9.—Mrs. Florence Carman, wife of Edwin Carman, a physician of this village, was arrested for the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey.

Mrs. Bailey, wife of a wealthy New York hat manufacturer, was shot while in Dr. Carman's office a week ago. Her assassin put a hand through a window and fired one shot from a pistol. The bullet penetrated Mrs. Bailey's lung.

The arrest of Mrs. Carman, who has a daughter twelve years old, followed the conclusion of the inquest into the death of Mrs. Bailey. She was taken into custody at her home.

The warrant for Mrs. Carman's arrest was issued by acting Coroner Norton. The district attorney, Lewis J. Smith; Sheriff Pettit and several officers went to the Carman home with the warrant. Mrs. Carman, who expected the action, was in conference with her husband and George M. Levy, her attorney. She accepted the situation with the same courage that has marked her every action since the day of the murder.

Before Mrs. Carman was taken to the Mineola jail in Sheriff Pettit's motor car, she was arraigned before Coroner Norton, who held a special session of his court in the Carman residence. Lawyer Levy entered a plea of not guilty for his client.

The inquest, the last of several sessions staged since the murder, produced a sensation in the person of Edward T. Barden. Mr. Barden, an insurance man, testified that he had seen a woman at the window through which the fatal shot was fired on the night of the tragedy. He did not testify that the woman he saw was Mrs. Carman, whom he knew, but he described her as wearing a light shirt waist and dark skirt and a light hair.

Other witnesses had so described the clothing worn by Mrs. Carman on the night of the murder. Mrs. Carman has sworn she was not dressed at the time the fatal shot was fired. She has maintained that she was in her bedroom in a kimono. She said she heard a disturbance down stairs and then dressed and went to the doctor's office. There she found Mrs. Bailey dead.

Barden, in giving his testimony, said that he passed the Carman home and had just turned back toward his own home, when he heard a noise like the explosion of an automobile tire.

"I saw a woman walking through the back on the west side of the doctor's house about opposite the office," he said. "The woman was about five feet from the window of the office. She wore a dark skirt and a white waist. She was walking toward the rear of the house."

"JOKER" HELD FOR MURDER

Salisbury Man Releases Friend From All Responsibility.

Salisbury, Md., July 9.—George Stoops, who was arrested with Joseph Darby, charged with burning Benjamin Goslee, a seventy-one-year-old colored man, to death at Hebron last Sunday as a joke, was released from custody following an inquest at Mebron. Roy Darby was held without bail.

Darby testified that while he and Stoops were drinking at the home of the former on Sunday, Goslee passed and they called to him and asked him to have a drink.

After giving the old man several drinks they tried to get him to leave the house, and in order to make him move faster he took a lamp from the mantle and poured oil on the man and then applied a match. He stated that Goslee ran out of the house, where he and Stoops succeeded in putting out the flames after he was badly burned. He said Stoops was in the yard at the time he set fire to Goslee and did not take any part in it. Stoops' testimony was the same as Darby's.

Mrs. Wilson Wins Squirrel.

Washington, July 9.—Mrs. Woodrow Wilson finds a great deal of amusement in playing with a gray squirrel, who makes his home in the White House grounds. This squirrel will not notice any one else, but comes bounding over to the lawn to greet Mrs. Wilson.

Moose Killed by Engine.

Quebec, July 9.—A big bull moose lies dead here, the victim of a quick tragic fate on the St. Johns-Quebec railway, near Lake Edward. It raced down the line in front of the express. Then seeing that it was being overhauled, it turned and stood its ground and met the engine head on.

Women Lose In Georgia.

Atlanta, Ga., July 9.—The house committee on constitutional amendments decided by a vote of 5 to 4 to report adversely a bill giving women the right to the ballot in state and county elections.

It is confidently expected that since William J. Burns has become identified with the mystery surrounding the shooting of Mrs. Louise Bailey in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman at Freeport, N. Y. last week, the case will be solved. Among the witnesses at the inquest were William B. Bailey, husband of the murdered woman, and his daughter, Miss Madeline Bailey.

MILITANTS ANNOY THE KING AND QUEEN

Block Royal Procession in Scotland and Wave Banners.

Dumbarton, Scotland, July 9.—Militant suffragettes made desperate efforts to attract the attention of King George and Queen Mary, who are making a tour through Scotland.

At the Balloch bridge, at the foot of Loch Lomond, the women cut down all the decorations, and at Dalmuir, ten miles from Glasgow, they managed to break out a banner bearing the words, "Your majesty, stop the forcible feeding and torturing of women," across the route as the procession arrived. At the same time one woman armed with a megaphone howled denunciations of forcible feeding.

Neither the king nor the queen paid the slightest attention, but the crowd who had gathered to see their majesties displayed such a hostile attitude that the militant suffragettes beat a hasty retreat.

An attempt of two militant suffragettes to blow up the birthplace of Robert Burns, the famous poet, was frustrated by the vigilance of a watchman.

The women were surprised while planting a bomb under the famous old farm house at Alloway. Both fled before they could ignite the fuse.

Jamaica Ginger Under Ban.

Topeka, Kan., July 9.—Jamaica ginger was placed under the ban in Kansas, when the supreme court held that it is intoxicating and that a druggist who sells it may be arrested for violating the prohibition law. The court also held that lemon and vanilla extracts, cologne, camphor and similar tinctures, extracts and essences, if they actually make a man drunk, are to be classed as intoxicating liquors.

Fall Kills Colonel Dennis.

Washington, July 9.—Colonel Frank Lee Dennis, United States Marine Corps, retired, fell over the stairway banister from the second floor of his home and was killed. He was quartermaster from 1899 until his retirement last year. Three years ago he was a candidate for commandant of the Marine Corps.

TO GET FUNDS

Refuses to Allow Money from Automobile Licenses to be Kept.

Judge McCarrell in the Dauphin county court on Wednesday refused to make a supersedeas the appeal of Auditor General Powell and State Treasurer Young to the Supreme court in the automobile license case. The effect of a supersedeas would have been to stop all chance of the state highway commissioner getting the use of any of the million dollars accumulated from licenses until the Supreme Court passed upon the questions raised.

Wallingford In His Prime

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

SYNOPSIS

J. Rufus Wallingford, skillful manipulator of other people's money for his own benefit, meets Benson Falls, the son of a railroad president, and three equally idle friends.

Wallingford agrees to manage a company to market Benson Falls' patented portable bungalow after Falls drops the bomb that his father is soon to open a road through land once obtained from Wallingford at the latter's great financial loss.

Wallingford instructs his pal, Blackie Daw, to act as an accomplice in a scheme to bleed the four young men through fake orders for the portable house.

Daw, representing himself as three buyers, orders several hundred houses. Wallingford gets $12,000 from the rich man's order for the portable house on the company's output and threatens injunction suits against the company for infringement of other patents.

The company breaks up, and Wallingford and Daw retain 65 portable houses. Wallingford blocks President Falls' railroad scheme and is bought off for $1,250,000. Wallingford starts on another adventure, with his handy boy, Toad Jessup.

Wallingford buys stock in the Kimberly mine, promoted and operated by the Douglass brothers, and starts a big boom at Douglassville. Meanwhile one of the brothers is trying to sell Blackie Daw Kimberly stock in New York.

Big Bill Sammet is hooted down when he reveals before a Douglassville crowd Wallingford's part in Cindersburg. Wallingford sees how the Douglass brothers stone men out of camp who apply for jobs and recognize the Douglass brothers as mine takers.

Wallingford hires the stoned men as a strong arm gang. He increases his popularity by giving a library to the mining camp. Blackie Daw in New York fails for some of the Kimberly mining stock.

Wallingford's past job hunters even up past scores by cleaning up the Douglass brothers and their strong arm leader. Wallingford stalls off angry stockholders in the camp.

Wallingford and Blackie Daw skip the camp under fire, but clean up $150,000 on houses and lots. Starting a new adventure, they meet Mr. Dillon of the Dillon Department Stores company.

Mr. Wallingford and Mrs. Daw train Melissa Tripp as dancing star for "The Lama's Goat." The show is to be given at the Avon theater.

Wallingford and Daw get interested in the event, and Wallingford sees a way to bleed Dillon. Preparations for the show continue, much to the distress of the women over the amateurishness of Melissa Tripp.

The show proves a big hit through the efforts of Blackie Daw, who takes a principal part at a moment's notice.

CHAPTER XIV.

Putting One Over.

ON the morning of the momentous opening date of "The Lama's Goat" Melissa Tripp was stricken with her first attack of stage fright, which took the form of nervous chills. Dicky Dolger, his occupation more or less gone, arose at rosy dawn, emptied his own cellaret and those in the Sheraton and Art Nouveau rooms and fell downstairs, and Ricketts Johnson lost the conductor's score of the music. At the final rehearsal that day two of the most important chorus girls left a yawning gap in the ranks by their failure to appear. Miss Devoe utterly refused to go on that night unless they settled in her favor the allotment of the star dressing room now in dispute between herself and Melissa Tripp. The electrician who had rehearsed all the light effects burned his hand. A new grip man poked one of the heroic sized papier mache goats through the rear wall of the temple, and the stage manager had a fight with Willis Lawrence, the big basso.

Through all these trifling incidents Violet Bonnie, though working like a stone crusher and meeting each death blow as it came up with a fierce energy that should have belonged only to despair, retained an amazing cheerfulness, which was explained when, over the hasty sandwich that formed her dinner, she observed to the only companion who was untroubled enough of disposition to remain with her through it all:

"Blackie, it's a pipe! Never in the history of the Big Lama was there a production that started off with so many signs of being a winner. If we'd had a smooth rehearsal this morning and everything else had gone off as gay as an election bet wine fest, I'd have been out right now ordering a calla lily Rock of Ages and being measured for my crape."

At 7:15, however, she sent a hurry-up call for Blackie, who was already in the lobby with Wallingford, glomming serenely over the advance sale. Hastening back, Blackie found Violet Bonnie seated in a lonely state upon the temple steps of the gorgeous first act set.

"It's all over, Blackie," she said, with stiff lips which somehow stretched and pulled and numbly hurt as she tried to form the words. "Somebody has sure put a Dutch hex on this show," and she twisted a lace kerchief into a rough little string.

"Cheer up," begged Blackie, responding nobly, though with a sinking heart, to this new demand upon his cheerfulness. "The fatalities may not be so great as at first reported. Who mixed up the switchboard this time?"

"Delaney?" she gulped.

"Delaney? What's he kicking about?"

"Cramps," she wailed. "Cramps, gone him! I just got a note that he's had three doctors, and I guess a plumber, trying to take the kinks out of his stomach, but he can't be repaired in time."

"How inconsiderate of him!" murmured Blackie politely, still trying to be brave. "Why, he's the grand lama!" he exclaimed, awakening suddenly to the enormity of the blow. "This show can't go on without a lama. What are you going to do, girl?"

"Do?" she half shrieked. "I'm going up to Squamsett and strangle Martha Tripp with her own corkscrew!" And suddenly for the first time in her life she gave way to complete despair and threw her arms around Blackie's neck and sobbed—actually sobbed!

Blackie was scared to a pale Nile green. "Cheer up," he begged, with a feeble imitation of his usual flippant heartiness and patted her automatically upon the shoulder. "Cheer up, VI. Say, for the love of Mike, cheer up or I'll go dippy myself!" And he looked about him wildly for some place to sit down, for Violet was no bantam, and she was leaning her full weight against him.

"The Lama's Goat" might have come to a premature demise, there and then, had not the distracted stage manager invigorated Violet by bursting upon them at that moment.

"Now the devil is to pay!" he bawled out. "Lawrence's boots for the second act have just come in, and they're an inch too short. What in Texas are we going to do about it?"

"Saw his toes off!" ordered Violet, turning fiercely upon him.

"But," protested the stage manager, "Shut up!" she cried. "I told you what to do; go and do it! And if you bother me any more I'll drop the asbestos curtain drum on you. I say get out! Blackie, lick him!"

"Sure," accepted Blackie, glad for any relief from his own surcharged feelings, and he made a dash for the stage manager, who bent him up the stairs by two lengths and locked him self in Lawrence's dressing room. Blackie returned apologetically. "He got away from me," he explained in some shame, "but I'll watch at the foot of the stairs till he comes out, if it takes all night."

Violet looked at him and suddenly laughed. "Honest, Blackie, I wouldn't be a widow again for $1,000,000 all money," she confessed. "You needn't watch at the foot of the stairs, though, for I've got a better job for you. You've got to go on tonight and play the Lama."

Blackie laughed at her. "Show me my best friend's baby and tell me to murder it, and I'll do it, but I refuse to step into your aeroplane. Where are you taking me?"

"To Delaney's dressing room," she finally replied, pushing him ahead of her by one elbow, like a country sheriff taking his first local malefactor to the lockup, and as inexorable as unrelenting fate, she pushed him up the stairs and into the star comedian's dressing room, where the grand lama's costumes hung upon their hooks in gaudy array, and Delaney's own messy assortment of grease paints lay spread out upon a Joseph's coat of rhamolis skin.

"But look here, VI," persisted Blackie, genuinely panic stricken; "you don't know what you're running me up against. I can't!"

"Take off your coat and vest and collar and tie and shirt, and rub that cold cream all over your face," she ordered. "I'll be back as soon as I've seen whether Melissa Tripp is having fits or only the ague."

"Just one moment," commanded Blackie, holding up a compelling hand. "Are you on the dead level about this?"

"Why, certainly I am! You're exactly Delaney's size. You know all the lines, business and cues, and you know the words and music of every song. You play the Grand Lama tonight!"

"But I sing like a pig under a barbed wire fence," still objected Blackie, who, however, had already removed his coat and vest and was now tugging at his collar.

Violet disdained to answer that foolish objection and started out the door, but Blackie recalled her.

"You win," he gave in, "but I want a case of 190 proof rye up here in five minutes."

Violet turned and contemplated him thoughtfully. "I believe that is a noble little idea," she agreed. "I'll send for it right away, but you must let me feed it to you. There's nobody in this world, not even you yourself, can tell as good as I can when you've got just the right edge on."

Somebody repeated Blackie's first cue to him three times a little later on and pushed him on the stage. He uttered the well remembered first line in a dazed air to no one in particular, and out in front everybody laughed. As one in a dream Blackie went through the part of the Grand Lama in precisely the manner in which for a month he had been urging Delaney to play it. When the curtain rang down on the first act Miss Devoe hated him for life, for the recalls were all for him. Violet Bonnie threw her arms around him with gurgles of joy.

"This is the proudest minute of my life!" she exclaimed.

"Give me a goblet of rye," begged Blackie huskily.

"Clear!" yelled the stage manager to the pro tem star comedian and his wife.

"Get out of the road, you!" snapped a grip man as he slammed past them with a set of marble steps on his shoulder.

The next Blackie remembered was having his costume torn off in the dressing room and another one thrust upon him.

"You'd better step out and tell them that Delaney's sick and that an understudy was put on at a moment's notice," he suggested in his only lucid interval.

Somebody laughed at that. It sounded like his wife. Then he was on the stage again and great peals of laughter were rolling up to him and over him from out that vast yawning pit of dim human mistiness. It followed him wherever he went. It annoyed him whenever he spoke, because he was never allowed to finish what he had to say, but there was something in it that he seemed to like too. It seemed to liven him up and make him more active.

It was so all through the play. Before the evening was half over the experienced Violet Bonnie went around shaking hands with everybody who would stand still long enough, and with herself when nobody else was handy. She was the happiest woman in the world, and the proudest, for Blackie had done it all! She told him as much, over and over, until she almost made him believe it after the last act.

"Well," he finally conceded, "I never would have done it if it hadn't been for that souse."

"Souse?" she repeated, laughing. "Why, Blackie, you haven't had a drink today," and she pointed to the still uncorked bottle upon his makeup table.

He looked at it, astounded, until he finally believed that, too. "Somebody got me a corkscrew," he directed. "I've got eight drinks coming."

The stage manager burst into the dressing room just at Blackie, submitting to cocoa butter, was taking the second of his belated drinks and all but embraced him.

"Your reputation's made from this minute!" the stage manager exclaimed. "That's what I was afraid of before I started," retorted Blackie, with a rather sheepish grin.

"You've put over the biggest hit on Broadway. I just got word from Delaney's wife that he can come back tomorrow, but if he does come back it'll be to carry a spear."

"He'll play the part tomorrow night if he can walk," asserted Violet Bonnie. "I got a nice face, and I like it. I wouldn't abuse it this way again for $1,000,000!"

"You don't mean you're not going to play any more, Mr. Daw?" exclaimed the stage manager, turning chalky.

"Why, it would be a crime for you to quit!"

"I'm so proud of Blackie that I've got gooseflesh," interposed Violet Bonnie. "But just the same, he quits!"

"Thanks," said Blackie, both relieved and surprised.

"Oh, I'm not dissatisfied."

"You needn't thank me," retorted his proud wife. "Of course, you don't know it, but you slobbered around among goosy eyes all night, and there's four of the little blonde squabs in the chorus that go at the end of the week; Nos. 3, 6, 7 and 13. Give 'em their notices, Ben."

"By the way, how did Melissa go?" asked Blackie earnestly, very happy indeed to change the subject.

"In a taxi," replied the stage manager. "I think she went away with a dried up little lollipop that hung around on the prompt side all night, apologizing to the scenery."

"That's right; you didn't know about Melissa, did you?" inquired Violet, with a flush of anger that ended in a laugh. "You know, she has two dances, one just before the goat dance. Well, they giggled her off the stage in the first one, and she left for Squamsett, I guess, without even stopping to change her costume."

"I don't see how you cut out the second dance," puzzled Blackie. "I wish I'd have been present at this show. I'd like to have seen how the plot turned out."

"It turned out fine!" Violet assured him with great enthusiasm. "We pulled Dicky Dolger out of his souse in the back part of the right proscenium box, and we fixed up the part in the seven minutes between the two dances. Elsie Devoe was just dressing for her third act change. We explained it to her and threw her into Lhaa's second costume, and she came on and did the dance of the sacred goat so swell you could almost hear her bleat, knew every step of it just from watching that Tripp joke rehearse. Then she unveiled and Lhaa turned out to be the daughter, and as the sacred dancer had a right to marry anybody in the kingdom. It made the plot swell. Next to you, Blackie, it was the hit of the show."

"It certainly got 'em," agreed the stage manager delightedly. "The music helped a lot. You know, there were three managers and a ticket hunter for Dicky Dolger and Ricketts Johnson before the last act curtain rung up. They've come back, and so has Devoe and everybody else."

"Devoe's a perfect lady, I'll say that for her," asserted Violet warmly. "She's strictly professional. She kept her eyes to herself and hated Blackie and everybody else that got a hand."

Wallingford and Mrs. Wallingford and Toad Jessup found their happy way back to the star comedian's dressing room and added to the general jubilation.

"It's an honor to know you, Blackie," chuckled Wallingford, while the two women embraced each other fervently, and sat on Delaney's battered old trunk, hand in hand, to tell each other all about it in agitated snatches.

"Did you see the show, Jim?" asked Blackie in surprise. "Where did you sit?"

"In the left stage box," replied Wallingford indignantly. "You looked at us half the time!"

Blackie pondered that marvel in silence a moment. "Have a drink!" he finally sighed. "Toad, go scare us up another glass, Jimmy, it's too bad you're not in on the personal triumph of this thing, along with us artists."

"Oh, I'm not dissatisfied," Wallingford informed him with easy nonchalance. "It isn't my game, but still I'll clean up about $150,000 on the side."

"I suppose so," grumbled Blackie. "It's got to be a habit with you. Who suffers this time?"

"Dillon," explained Wallingford, chuckling. "I bought one little $100 share of stock in his company today, and tomorrow I'm going to bring suit, as a stockholder, for dissolution of his company, on the grounds of misrepresentation and misuse of funds. My lawyer demanded to see the books four minutes after I bought my share of stock, and he tells me that I'll have no trouble at all in getting an injunction that will prevent the Dillon company from taking any steps toward the extension of the business within the next thirty days."

"I've heard of pikers, but holding up a $5,000,000 company to protect a $100 certificate comes close to the edge of being the limit," judged Blackie after mature deliberation. "Why all this grouch against Dillon? And why tie his hands for thirty days—so as to quiet his nerves?"

Wallingford smiled scraphically. "Merely so I can exercise my option on the Avon theater at $200,000," he replied, striking a match on the big red

"No Smoking" sign and lighting a long black cigar. "The hoodoo is broken, and the house is worth double my option at this very minute. Nusselanger of the syndicate was trying to buy it from Sicksels tonight, and Sicksels is at this moment over at the Breches hotel drowning his sorrows with one hand and drinking to his luck with the other."

Blackie gazed upon his friend with thoughtful admiration for awhile, and then he grinned. "I want you to go over with me and call on Dillon tomorrow right after you file your suit," he suggested. "I want him to wait on us while I pick out a pink undershirt and a pair of silk suspenders."

IRGE TRUST BILL CHANGES

Middle West Business Men Confer With Wilson.

DO NOT SEEK ANY DELAY

They Discussed Industrial and Commercial Conditions in the West and Asked President to Modify Program.

Washington, July 9.—The great business interests of the middle west centering in Chicago had their innings at the White House.

A group of members of the Chicago Association of Commerce came to tell President Wilson what the west thinks of his proposed trust legislation and to discuss commercial and industrial conditions.

Some changes in the administration trust program were urged and many phases of the industrial conditions of the country were considered in the hour's interview with the president, but no delay on the trust legislation was asked. Not in many months has the president granted an entire hour to a delegation of this kind.

All details of the pending anti-trust bills were gone over in the conference. Afterward this statement was issued at the White House:

"The president expressed his pleasure at having been consulted by the group of gentlemen who represented the Chicago Chamber of Commerce, and said that he felt that the conference has been mutually instructive and helpful."

The conference had to do with particulars of the bills. The Chicago delegation advocated establishing an interstate trade commission, broader in scope than that proposed in the Newlands and narrower in scope in other respects.

Speaking on the labor exemption clause of the Clayton bill, the president told the business men it was intended to legalize the existence and operations of labor unions and similar organizations as such. The Chicago men replied that they would approve of such a provision, if nothing else was provided, but considered the exemption of any organization as "class discrimination."

The delegation favored a railroad securities bill, but opposed a feature of the Newlands trade commission bill which would require all corporations to make annual reports to the commission. They thought that such reports should only be made when particularly desired by the commission.

The president promised the delegation he would try to arrange a conference between them and Representative Covington, of Maryland, who framed the trade commission bill as it passed the house.

With regard to the Clayton anti-trust bill the association maintained that section 2, forbidding discrimination in price between different purchasers necessarily would make fixed prices and destroy competition rather than aid it. It held that section 3, forbidding refusal of owners of mines and others to sell to any responsible firm was well covered by the Sherman law, which such practices were contrary to public benefit; that section 4, forbidding the disposition of merchandise on condition that the purchaser shall not use or deal in merchandise of a competitor can be readily reached by the Sherman law, and that if applied literally it would "reduce the incentive to capitalize good will in American trade names."

DEMOCRATS REVOLT

Congressional Committee in Louisiana Goes Over to Progressives.

Washington, July 9.—Democratic leaders from the south were stunned by the news received from the Third Louisiana district, where the Democratic congressional committee went over to the Bull Moose party in a body.

The Louisiana Democrats are out of tune with the Wilson administration and are ripe for a revolt. The split in the Third district is expected to extend throughout the state and may result in the election of three Progressive members from Louisiana.

The Third district leads the revolt, because the Democratic sugar tariff has caused ruin to the industry in that section. The rice and lumber industries also have been hard hit in Louisiana.

Democrats Elect Man Dead Ten Years.

Macon, Ga., July 9.—W. J. Mosley, who died ten years ago, was elected a member of the Bibb county Democratic executive committee in the recent county primary. Two thousand voters cast ballots for him without knowing that for a decade Mosley had been in his grave. A relative, who had read in a newspaper of Mosley's election, informed officials of the error.

Leg Cut Off By Mower.

Camden, N. J., July 9.—Walter Trau, thirteen years old, of this city was badly injured when a mowing machine in a lot near his home cut off his left leg. The boy was hurried by trolley to the West Jersey Homeopathic hospital, where surgeons operated at once. His condition is serious. The leg was cut off below the knee.

EIGHT EXPLORERS MISSING

Members of Stefansson Arctic Expedition Not With Party.

Ottawa, Ont., July 9.—Eight members of the Stefansson Arctic expedition, who were believed to be on Wrangell Island, off the coast of Alaska, with the rest of the party which was reported safe more than a month ago, after their ship, the Karluk, sank off Siberia, are now thought to be lost, according to a report which Deputy Minister of Marine Debarrets received from Captain Robert A. Bartlett in Nome. Bartlett commanded the Karluk.

They were engaged in transporting provisions from an ice floe to Wrangell Island and were making scientific explorations at the same time.

BALTIMORE BOSS ACCUSED OF GRAFT

John J. Mahon and Lieutenant Face Indictment.

Baltimore, July 9.—John J. Mahon, the Democratic city "boss," James H. Larkins, Daniel J. Loden and W. Harry Pairo, all prominent local politicians, were presented by the grand jury.

Mahon, Larkins and Loden, who are Democrats, are charged with violating the corrupt practices act in connection with an alleged collection of money by policemen in the gubernatorial campaign of 1911.

The money was to go to the Democratic campaign fund.

Pairo is accused of bribery in connection with legislation in the general assembly of 1912, of which he was a member, to increase the salaries of the members of the police department. He was a member of the house of delegates and Republican floor leader.

Loden is collector of water rents and licenses of Baltimore.

A grand jury presentment is a preliminary to an indictment, although the latter action does not always follow.

Two Oil Well Shooters Killed.

Findlay, O., July 9.—Charles Armstrong and P. B. Longabaugh, oil well shooters, were instantly killed by the explosion of several hundred quarts of nitro-glycerine which they were taking to Buckland to shoot an oil well. The men were literally blown to atoms, as not a shred of flesh can be found.

Washington, July 9.—By unanimous vote the senate voted to appropriate $200,000 for the relief of the fire sufferers at Salem, Mass.

HOW ST. LOUIS TWO MAN GOVERNMENT WILL WORK.

New Scheme Provides For Recall and Other Experimental Plans.

The new charter, granting St. Louis broad powers of municipal ownership, centralizing the municipal government in the mayor and comptroller, creating a merit system, a legislative assembly of one house and the initiative, referendum and recall, will soon go into general effect. Nearly three years will elapse before there will be a complete reorganization of all of the offices under its provisions.

The house of delegates will pass out of existence next April. Its members and those of city council will hold office until their successors are elected next April. A board of twenty-eight aldermen, nominated at large and elected at large, then will succeed the present municipal assembly. Any elective official will be liable to recall on petitions signed by 20 per cent of the registered voters, in two thirds of the wards.

Mayor Kiel and Comptroller Payer will serve until 1917, the terms for which they were elected by the people. While all the other elective officials hold office during the terms for which they were elected, to 1917, they, in effect, become appointive officers after the charter goes into effect.

Officials will be appointed by the mayor as follows: Assessor, collector, treasurer, supply commissioner, register, city counselor, city marshal, two city court judges, president of the board of public service, director of public utilities, director of streets and sewers, director of public welfare and directors of public safety.

The mayor also will appoint an efficiency board, similar to the civil service commission. This board will pass upon applications for all city positions not elective or appointive.

The directors of streets and sewers, public welfare and public service, with a president, will constitute the board of public service.

The comptroller is to be the head of the department of finance, but the budget, the needs of the departments and the tax rate will be attended to by a board of estimate and proportion, composed of the mayor, comptroller and president of the board of aldermen.

CLAIMS PYORRHEA CURE.

Says Germ Responsible For Disease of Teeth Infected Soldiers in Philippines.

Dr. Michael T. Barrett, a Philadelphia dentist, announced that he had found the germ which causes that dread disease of the teeth—pyorrhea. Every since dentistry became a science this disease, which causes teeth to drop from the gums and makes the use of false teeth necessary, has been the subject of study and investigation, always with small result.

"There is a low animal organism of the amoeba type which I believe is entirely to blame for the presence of pyorrhea in the mouth," said Dr. Barrett. "I have examined forty-seven patients who were afflicted with pyorrhea, and in every instance I found this same animal organism existing in the gums."

"I was aided in finding a treatment for the disease by the fact that this same amoeba which I believe is the cause of pyorrhea in the mouth was found several years ago to be the cause of dysentery and liver trouble among our soldiers in the Philippines. Working on his theory, I applied a solution of emetine to the diseased tissues of the mouth in which I found pyorrhea existing and the pyorrhea disappeared coincident with the killing of the amoeba."

Suffragists' Self Sacrifice Day.

Suffragists all over the country are to be put to a supreme test on Aug. 15, which has been declared a national self sacrifice day by Dr. Anna Shaw and the women's congressional committee. Real suffragists then may prove their sincerity by giving up some luxury and pleasure and sending the monetary equivalent to Miss Jane Adams, treasurer. The object is to raise $50,000 needed to carry on campaign work in Nevada, Nebraska, the Dakotas, Montana and Missouri.

Seven minutes of blasts from the whistle of a Passaic (N. J.) factory in honor of the marriage of the daughter of the superintendent turned out five volunteer fire departments.

A HARD DIAMOND

By EVERETT P. CLARKE

The history of the Rainsley diamond is unique. It received its name from Joseph Rainsley, who was its first and for a long while its only possessor. He went to South Africa with his wife and two little children to make his fortune, leased some land and began to hunt for diamonds. He picked up nothing but very small stones for awhile till one day he found one of extraordinary size. It was as big as an acorn.

Rainsley was unwise enough to show the stone to John Bradner, a neighbor. Indeed, he was not sure it was a diamond until Bradner told him so. The next day Rainsley was surprised at a visit of Bradner with a constable who had a search warrant for the diamond. Bradner having put in a claim that the stone had been found on his land and he was the rightful owner. Mrs. Rainsley, taking in the situation and knowing that what they sought was in her own bureau drawer took it when the searching party was at another part of the house and dropped it in a chink between two logs of which the house was built.

The diamond was not found. Joe Rainsley and his wife now had a problem before them. The stone was a fortune in itself, but unless they could get it away it would be of no use to them.

After considering many ways they hit upon one which they hoped would be successful. They determined to leave their home, taking with them the scanty supply of household goods they possessed. Their living room was decorated with a rough plaster head and shoulders of a child. Mrs. Rainsley, who had some artistic skill, made a replica of this and while the plaster was soft embedded the diamond in its center. Then she broke the original into fragments, which she buried in the ground.

Though Bradner and his officials knew of the Rainsleys' departure, they made no effort to recover the diamond. The family went to the coast, whence they sailed for America. They would have been willing to pay the duty on the diamond, but feared that Bradner had sent an agent with them to catch it if they did so and to inform the customs officers that they were smuggling it into the country if they did not.

On the steamer with them was a young Englishman named Cutts, who won Mrs. Rainsley's good will by paying especial attention to little Tommy Rainsley, aged four years, and in this way became intimate with the family. Cutts talked a great deal about how to outwit customs officers. Mrs. Rainsley placed such confidence in his methods and experience in smuggling that she asked him if he had ever thought of concealing small dutiable articles in plaster ornaments. Cutts said that he had not, but thought it would be a good way. Then he began to talk about plaster casts, harping on the subject till Mrs. Rainsley grew suspicious, and her suspicions once being aroused, she was soon sure that Cutts was Bradner's agent and would inform the customs officers that they were smuggling a diamond concealed in a plaster image.

The night before reaching port they smashed the image, and Rainsley concluded to carry it in his mouth. As he and his wife and children stepped ashore they were invited into a room, where all their baggage was taken. The baggage having been carefully examined, they were all searched, but nothing discovered. Rainsley had the stone well tucked away far back on one side of his mouth, and gave no evidence in speech or otherwise of its being there. He was congratulating himself that he had got his fortune safely through when he was arrested on a charge made by Cutts that he had stolen money from him. Cutts declared that he had lost bank bills, the numbers of which he gave. One of the bills was found in Rainsley's pocket-book. Cutts had put it there. Rainsley was taken to jail.

Mrs. Rainsley followed her husband to the jail and went with him to his cell. After he was locked in she asked leave to kiss him goodby. This was granted, and the lips of husband and wife were glued together and the diamond passed from the husband's mouth to the wife's.

The next day Cutts secured a private interview with Rainsley, telling him that he was sure of conviction and would be sent to state prison for a term of years. Cutts admitted that he was Bradner's agent and for a half interest in the diamond would withdraw the charge against him. Rainsley refused. Later Mrs. Rainsley called to see her husband and told him that she had buried the diamond where no one but herself could ever find it.

When Cutts came again to the jail Rainsley told him that Mrs. Rainsley had put the diamond where no one could find it and after he had served his term in state prison for the offense he had not committed he would be rich. The day before the trial Cutts, feeling sure that he could not get the stone by prosecuting, offered not to appear against Rainsley if he would give him $1,000. Rainsley agreed to do this as soon as he could sell the diamond and the next day went forth a free man.

The diamond is now the property of an American multimillionaire, and the Rainsleys are rich.

Have Dark Hair and Look Young

Nobody can Tell when you Darken Gray, Faded Hair with Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied--it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.
